

The Hydrogen Economy: Are We There Yet?

Dr. Michael Heinekey

Department of Chemistry, University of Washington

Progress toward the widespread use of hydrogen as an energy currency will be discussed from the point of view of inorganic chemistry. Aspects of the fundamental coordination chemistry of dihydrogen will be covered, along with the use of ammonia boranes for hydrogen storage and biomimetic approaches to hydrogen utilization.